

Valves release high pressure compressed air which travels across the clean air plenum and through the large openings in the tubesheet.

Reverse air pressure dislodges particles which fall downward into collection hopper.